Dr. Eric S. Holmboe

Why CBME and Why Now? A Perspective from South of the Border

Eric S. Holmboe, MD, MACP, FRCP, FAoME(hon)

Dr. Holmboe is Senior Vice President, Milestones Development and Evaluation at the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME). He is also Professor Adjunct of Medicine at Yale University, and Adjunct Professor of Medicine at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences and Fineberg School of Medicine at Northwestern University.

He also served as the Associate Program Director, Yale Primary Care Internal Medicine Residency Program, Director of Student Clinical Assessment, Yale School of Medicine and Assistant Director of the Yale Robert Wood Johnson Clinical Scholars program. Before joining Yale in 2000, he served as Division Chief of General Internal Medicine at the National Naval Medical Center. Dr. Holmboe retired from the US Naval Reserves in 2005.

His research interests include interventions to improve quality of care and methods in the assessment of clinical competence. His professional memberships include the American College of Physicians, where he is a Master of the College, Society of General Internal Medicine and Association of Medical Education in Europe. He is an honorary Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians in London and the Academy of Medical Educators.

Dr. Holmboe is a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College and the University of Rochester School of Medicine. He completed his residency and chief residency at Yale-New Haven Hospital, and was a Robert Wood Johnson Clinical Scholar at Yale University.

About the Lecture:

Competency-based medical education (CBME) has gained substantial traction in many medical education systems across the globe over the last twenty years. However, CBME is not without its vocal critics. In this session we will explore some of the underlying rationale and drivers for competencies. Lessons from changes in the graduate medical education system of the United States will be shared to highlight challenges in implementation. This lecture is made possible through the Principal's Development Fund International Visitors Program.
